Bently Paiz it's okay to have a different opinion and not put other people down. Like when we go out with other *likeminded* people, we don't put Biden down, we celebrate our freedom, our rights and what we believe in. Unfortunately though the majority who isn't voting for Trump only knows how to put republicans down and not how to celebrate what they believe in positively - and I would challenge you to be the change we need.

Oct 16, 2020 10:01:43am

Joeylynn Mesaros replied to Bently Paiz's comment.

Bently Paiz but what I was suggesting you do instead of continue to bash Trump into the ground with what you believe to be facts about him, though I challenge you to do more non-biased research and you might find your own opinions challenged, was to instead talk about what Biden does that you value or appreciate. And still you have proven that you are not capable of doing that, and this is where the once valued ability to debate politics is dead and gone and now it's just republicans on the defense against largely untrue lies and attacks. There was ONE person who drug that black lives matter flag, and he was not part of our group, nor is that welcomed. We do not shout racist slurs out of the windows, we are waving and smiling - even at the Biden supporters holding their signs - because we aren't about putting other people down. I encourage you to attend a Trump train so that you can see it's not like what you've heard on media that alters facts. But I really won't sit here and defend my beliefs to you when you aren't even producing what it is about Biden that you value. Hating Trump isn't a valid reason for voting for Biden (though you aren't old enough to vote; I value your interest in politics). You're not understanding the detrimental effects that would come from electing Biden to presidency. I really encourage you to independently research your own facts, and pull up a list of what each candidate stands for, and what they claim to accomplish, and see how that effects the people you care most about. And then if it still proves to be Biden, instead of just negatively speaking about Trump, talk about the positives that you see in Biden.

Oct 16, 2020 10:55:33am

Joeylynn Mesaros replied to Bently Paiz's comment.

Bently Paiz I value that he values God, family and American people. Including his goal for America to be more self-sustaining as a country. That he has recovered so many manufacturing jobs, lowered taxes for not just the wealthy but everyone, that he is pro-life because every child (ESPECIALLY those that don't have a voice) matters, that he is not withholding the vaccine for Covid but pushing it out as quickly as possible, that he has offered so many scholarships to students of color and people of disadvantage, that he continues to enable us the right and freedom to bear arms, freedom of religion, freedom of speech, that he wants to shut down hate groups that claim they are change-makers and are destroying small businesses, people and towns, I believe in fully funding the police, I believe that we should have stricter laws about immigrants coming into our country and not taking more taxes out of my paycheck to cover their expenses but to take care of our own people first. additionally I stand against socialism and any thing that hints at us as a country heading in that direction, and feel confident that Trump will keep us from losing the freedoms our soldiers and forefathers fought for us to have.

Oct 16, 2020 12:01:47pm

Joeylynn Mesaros replied to Diane Thompson's comment.

Diane Thompson I shared something about a democratic county commissioner candidate who was slandering republicans and Donald Trump, maybe you thought I was promoting it but I was bringing awareness to the fact that we need to vote for Kevin Webb so she isn't elected. And otherwise just a post about being able to have strong opinions but still getting along with people who disagree.

Oct 16, 2020 12:06:56pm

Joeylynn Mesaros replied to Adrianna Mendez's comment.

Adrianna Mendez he has cut our taxes and is building our economy at warp speed. You and I already know we disagree and arguing is futile because we're both very strong headed. I will never ever vote for someone who doesn't have the best intentions for our country just because I don't like someone else. That's the worst advice for uneducated voters. People need to pull up what each candidate is for and against and see where they align and vote for that person. Whether or not they'd choose that person as a friend, they need to choose that person as a president.

Oct 16, 2020 1:43:27pm

Joeylynn Mesaros replied to Adrianna Mendez's comment.

Adrianna Mendez you don't need to get heartbroken for me, I'm completely fine, empowered, educated and making a choice that I stand behind. I need no sympathy for that.

Oct 16, 2020 1:43:54pm

Joeylynn Mesaros replied to Adrianna Mendez's comment.

Adrianna Mendez the disagreement wasn't perceived as disrespectful but the comment on the laugh emoji and the name calling of passive aggressive wimps. And honestly while I say that we can disagree and still be friends, it's under context of friendly debate, and not aggressive arguments and name calling. This is not what I'm seeking on my page and I'm gonna go ahead and shut that down here, not because I don't believe that friends can disagree, but some people are looking for a fight no matter what and that's not the kind of friend I'm trying to keep company with. I'm sorry, but we can go ahead part ways on social media since this isn't keep peace or doing favors for anyone.

Joeylynn Mesaros replied to Adrianna Mendez's comment.

Adrianna Mendez before I block you to avoid further discord on my peaceful post, I want to say, I wasn't offended by the laugh emoji comment for own sake, but for Jen's because she is my friend and that unnecessarily rude. Secondly, voting for independent candidates is useless at this point. While there may be MANY better people than the 2 primary candidates, voting for someone without a chance is a waste of a vote. And please do not decide for me whether or not I am a great person, a manipulated person, or make claims that I'm in a cult following. I am an adult who makes my own decisions, and I choose to make them educated. And while you're unhinged about the debt of our country, I'm sure you accepted your stimulus check and have put it to good use. Good luck voting independent, tho IMHO this helps ensure Trump wins with what is essentially a wasted vote.

Tessa Baran what is disturbing?

Oct 16, 2020 7:31:04pm

Joeylynn Mesaros replied to Tessa Baran's comment.

Tessa Baran I am disturbing? Man, that is a pretty hurtful statement. I'm working on not caring what people think, so I'm gonna try and let that roll off. But honestly, we're cheering for 1 of the 2 candidates running for presidency, one of which is already president - so more than half of America agreed he was the best choice previously, so I'm not sure what's disturbing about having an opinion, using our voice and having fun while doing it. We aren't hurting anyone, and my post talked about not having to agree but to pursue what's important to you with your heart. It really breaks my heart how there is so much hate for people voting for Trump, instead of the people not voting for Trump just celebrating their own candidate choice separate from bashing. And you didn't even bash on Trump.. you bashed on me. You will never see me go to your posts and comment hurtful and strongly opinionated things that I might disagree with and ruin your fun. But that's where we can agree to be different!

Oct 16, 2020 7:55:02pm

Joeylynn Mesaros replied to Tessa Baran's comment.

Tessa Baran I'd rather if you disagree with me we could have a friendly conversation without name calling or you could just share you own opinions on your own page, or unfollow or just keep scrolling. However, I will clarify the support in question: I value that Trump values God, family and American people. Including his goal for America to be more self-sustaining as a country. That he has brought our economy back at warp speed, recovered so many manufacturing jobs, lowered taxes for not just the wealthy but everyone, that he is pro-life because every child (ESPECIALLY those that don't have a voice) matters, that he is not withholding the vaccine for Covid but pushing it out as quickly as possible, that he has offered so many scholarships to students of color and people of disadvantage, that he continues to enable us the right and freedom to bear arms, freedom of religion, freedom of speech, that he wants to shut down hate groups that claim they are change-makers and are destroying small businesses, people and towns, I believe in fully funding the police, I believe that we should have stricter laws about immigrants coming into our country and not taking more taxes out of my paycheck to cover their expenses but to take care of our own people first. additionally I stand against socialism and any thing that hints at us as a country heading in that direction, and feel confident that Trump will keep us from losing the freedoms our soldiers and forefathers fought for us to have. I understand that we all can lack class and appreciate that he has apologized for things he's done or said wrong. Obamacare is a joke and needs to be dismantled and replaced. I enjoy low gas prices, and God being present in my son's school. I definitely have areas where I disagree with what he has said or some values, but I'm not voting for him to be my bestie, or even as best personality. I'm voting for him to be the president to make the changes our country desperately needs to continue moving in a direction that sets our children up for successful futures where they can own their own homes and choose their own jobs and afford to put food on the table. I know that when I line up Trump's values and policies next to Biden's it's clear as a bell where my vote is going. And it is a sad movement of those voting for the concerning changes Biden wishes to implement just because people "don't like Trump" as a person.

Just from a perspective of someone who voted for Trump in regards to a Christian perspective, (which is one of the reasons I voted for him) is the fact that he fights to keep God in schools and in America, not for him being a model Christian. Like I was saying, I voted for my rights as a Christian, not him as a model Christian. ❤️

Joeylynn Mesaros replied to her own comment.

During the Obama/Biden administration, prayer was removed from school and saying "God" in school became taboo or offensive. The majority of my values as a Christian align with the Republican Party, there are multiple, but namely being pro-life is at the top of the list. And please know this is not the only reason I voted for Trump. I also appreciate fracking and byproducts of oil, the restored manufacturing jobs, relying more independently on the US instead of other countries, the right to bear arms, having secure borders and legal immigration, low tax, gas and milk prices, continued peace and progress in the Middle East, for the respect of American flag which is often disrespected by the opposing party, for the future of my child and grandchildren to enjoy the freedoms their forefathers and military fought for so they can avoid the collapse of our economy and the sad fast track to socialism. I am definitely not saying republicans are Christians and Democrats aren't (I have Christian family voting for Biden this year), but what I do know is Biden's values aren't aligning with my beliefs that are grounded in the Bible and so when I make a pros and cons list and compare the candidates it is clear to me that for my beliefs I need to vote for Trump.

Joeylynn Mesaros replied to her own comment.

Daphne, we could unpack this more and have a reasonable argument from both sides that gives each of us things to ponder and consider from both viewpoints. But again, I'm just stating the reasons for my vote since Jovanka asked, and I do feel that considering I only had 2 candidates to choose between, as a Christian I made the best choice that I could. I won't agree that voting for Trump makes me not-Christian. And I have not bashed on Biden or his supporters once or given my reasons for what I feel isn't Christian coming from that side of things, I'm only sharing what I know to be true for myself. Thanks.

Jovanka I absolutely agree! And I always enjoy a friendly discussion, and don't mind that we have different opinions and might not see eye to eye! No reason to not be kind and always a chance to learn or understand better. ❤️

I followed the bus through New Braunfels-Kyle and assure you there was ZERO harassment, we just rode down 35. Now we do have on video the bus driver swerving at our trucks and coming into our lanes and also video evidence of one of their vehicles sideswiping one of ours. But of course they're saying it was us 😂

But I still say they should call it a win since the Trump Train brought a bigger turn out than their own supporters would have 🙌

Joeylynn Mesaros commented on KSAT 12 & KSAT.com's post.

KSAT 12 & KSAT.com shame on you for not sharing the correct information you have access to before you go smearing people's reputations and further agitating the leftists for no reason. There are plenty of videos that show there was zero aggression or hostility and that the Biden vehicle sideswiped a Trump vehicle by entering his lane. So disappointed in yet another media source failing to share facts that aren't biased.
